Local Junior Championships 29th

After careful consideration, it has been decided by officials of the Western Ladies' Amateur Athletic Club to hold the Junior Track and Field Championships of Wetaskiwin and District on Saturday afternoon, June 29th. One of the objectives of the meet will be to select Wetaskiwin's representatives for the Provincial Junior Championship Meet to be held here August 7th, and the officials in charge at their decision as to date selected the 29th so as not to conflict with the school exams and preparation therefor. On the other hand, if the events were staged at a later date, many of the young people would undoubtedly be away on holidays. In the meantime work-outs will be held at the athletic park on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings at 6:45. These will be of brief duration each evening and should not interfere with school work.

The junior championships will be divided into two classes each for boys and girls: Junior "A" Boys and Junior "A" Girls (under 18 years of age) Junior "B" Boys and Junior "B" Girls (under 16 years of age). For each division of boys the program will be: 100 yards dash, 220 yards, and 440 yards; running broad

Weddings

RISTO-LINK

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the Olds Baptist Church, when Theodore Gustavus, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Risto, was united in marriage to Alma Louise, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Link, French Link, sister of the bride, acted as bridegroom, and Howard Risto, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

Rev. Wahl performed the marriage ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Risto left for Calgary and Banff to spend their honeymoon. The happy couple will reside on the groom's farm, west of Wetaskiwin.

MIQUELON-JACKSON

The marriage of Miss Margaret M. S. Jackson to Wilfred L. Miquelon, son of L. T. Miquelon, was solemnized at Calgary on Saturday, June 1st. Rev. Father Beauregard officiated. Misses Marguerite Austin's costumed recital of varied music can hardly be surpassed. Nell Patterson and his bride can touch the heart of the stoniest Scot. Granville Jones will kindle an immediate bond of friendship with every listener, and the Canadian lecturer, Dr. Ross, K.C., will stimulate with his economic interpretation of World Unrest. The afternoon of magic will puzzle adults as well as the kiddies. Last, but not least, "The Paisley" and "Smiling Through" will long be remembered for their side-splitting jollity, their life-problem parables, and their universal appeal.

President H. W. Wood of the U.F.A. says: "To my mind there is nothing more important to human progress and social well-being than the development of higher citizenship among the masses. To this end Chautauqua has a peculiar adaptability, and I am persuaded that in your management you have had the proper ideal, and that through Chautauqua you have made a real contribution. The upward struggle of humanity has always been slow and difficult and perhaps will be to the end. Any guiding force in that struggle makes the world better, and a better place in which to live. My earnest hope is that the Chautauqua may continue to thrive, to entertain, to teach and to educate."

RUTZ-METZNER

Zion Lutheran church was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday, June 12, at high noon, when Bertha Metzner of Ferintosh, became the bride of Paul Rutz, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rutz, well-known farmers of Ferintosh. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. Appelt, and the wedding breakfast was partaken of in the Lutheran Manse.

The bride looked very charming in a gown of white georgette, and wore a veil with orange blossoms. She was attended by Melitta Taube of Edmonton, who wore a dress of pink taffeta trimmed with lace, and wore a picture hat. The flower girls were Hilda Jacobs, Velma Schulz, Irma Rutz and Annie Rutz.

The happy couple left for a short honeymoon at Banff, and on their return will make their home on the Rutz farm at Ferintosh.

WETASKIWIN CHAUTAUQUA COMMENCES FRIDAY EVENING

"Hurry up, we're going to Junior Chautauqua," is the universal cry among school children these days when the moment school is out they hurry to the splendidly equipped Kiwanis Playground to learn new songs, play new games, and dramatize new stories. Under the direction of Miss Sheila Henderson of Toronto, plans are being made for a Junior Chautauqua parade on Thursday, when a pan band will be improvised and led by mounted riders.

Every year Chautauqua seems to supersede the last. This year we are offered the best program as yet produced. Miss Marguerite Austin's costumed recital of varied music can hardly be surpassed. Nell Patterson and his bride can touch the heart of the stoniest Scot. Granville Jones will kindle an immediate bond of friendship with every listener, and the Canadian lecturer, Dr. Ross, K.C., will stimulate with his economic interpretation of World Unrest. The afternoon of magic will puzzle adults as well as the kiddies. Last, but not least, "The Paisley" and "Smiling Through" will long be remembered for their side-splitting jollity, their life-problem parables, and their universal appeal.

THE NEW ELKS' HALL AT WETASKIWIN OPENED WITH NICE PROGRAM

The formal opening of the new Elks' hall at Wetaskiwin was made on the occasion of an elaborate and ceremonial dedication on Tuesday evening, June 12. The beautifully decorated main hall was set out with tables to accommodate more than two hundred guests. The ladies of the Order of Royal Purple Lodge, No. 23, were in charge of the banquet, which was served in a sumptuous manner and highly appreciated by the guests.

Bro. Bruce D. Howatt, Exalted Ruler of Wetaskiwin Lodge No. 01, officiated as chairman and conducted the ceremonies in a very efficient and happy way. Bro. Sam S. Savage, of Calgary, Grand Secretary of B.P.O.E. for the Dominion of Canada, performed the ceremony of opening the hall. Bro. W. J. Longlie on behalf of the building committee, which had so well completed its work, delivered to the grand secretary the key of the hall.

Bro. Savage in turn placed the key for safe keeping in the hands of Bro. Chas. D. Enman, secretary of the Wetaskiwin lodges. Mrs. J. E. Burkholder, mother of the ladies of the Order of the Royal Purple and very graciously acknowledged the shower of congratulations that followed the delightful banquet.

The principal address of the evening was delivered by Bro. Dr. Arthur F. Spanke, Exalted Ruler of Calgary Lodge No. 4, the largest Elks' organization in Canada. In a very earnest and frank address, Mr. Spanke held high the aims and principles of Elksdom and called upon all Brother Elks to ever maintain the high standard of community service which the work of an Elks involve.

Another issue of the Research Bulletin, issued by the Union of Alberta Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, attended the sessions of the Grand Chapter held in Edmonton last week. Bro. Geo. E. Wiseman was honored by being elected to the office of Grand Patron for the ensuing year.

The family of A. P. Moan moved to Edmonton on Saturday last, where they will take up their residence. The many friends of this esteemed family deeply regret their departure from the community and wish them all success in their new home.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Aboussafy and family left last week for Saskatoon where they expect to reside permanently. A firm of which Mr. Aboussafy is a member, are opening a wholesale grocery in that city and his hostess, Mrs. Gertrude Sullivan, will be with him every success in their new business venture.

A meeting of the Executive of the Girl Guide Association was held at the home of Mrs. Barnett on Monday, June 10th. Plans were discussed for raising funds to help the Guides with their summer camp, which is to be held on Pigeon Lake, from July 1 to 6 inclusive. It was decided to hold a tea and food sale on Saturday, June 22nd, and arrangements were made for same. Mr. Lively kindly lent the girls his store for this sale.

An enjoyable evening was spent at the home of Mrs. Olson on Tuesday last week, when about fifty neighbors and friends gathered for a surprise party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Hodson. The evening was spent in music and dancing, music being supplied by Kathleen and Robert Hodson and W. Ferguson. A delicious lunch was served at midnight. The young couple were the recipients of numerous useful gifts, and after wishing them every happiness for the future, the guests departed for their homes.

Premier Expects Return Natural Resources Soon

Hon. J. E. Brownlee Addresses Board of Trade and Kiwanis Club on One of Big Topics of Present Day

Hon. J. E. Brownlee, Premier of Alberta, was the principal speaker at the Board of Trade luncheon on Monday evening, and a large attendance enjoyed his very interesting and enlightening address on the subject of the natural resources of Alberta.

Prior to the address, the industrial committee introduced the matter of dissipating the dust nuisance in the city, which caused a brief discussion, when it was pointed out that the City Council had the matter in hand. Miss Henderson of the Canadian Chautauqua referred to the program of entertainment which commences here on Friday evening of this week.

At the commencement of his address, the Premier referred to the beneficial effects of such get together meetings as the joint luncheons of the Board of Trade and Kiwanis Club were holding. He then went into the subject of the natural resources very exhaustively and reviewed the whole situation from the time the Indians roamed the prairies and later the Hudson's Bay Company ruled all the West in a more despotic manner than any monarch in Europe. A charter was given this company by the stroke of the King's pen to rule an area as large as an empire.

While these conditions were existing West of the Great Lakes steps were being taken in the East to form a confederation of the provinces which was consummated in 1867. One of the first questions dealt with was the acquisition of the territory which is now the three prairie provinces, and a number of trips were made to London before negotiations were completed.

By these negotiations all the Western country was abandoned for a small sum of money, and one twentieth of all the arable land was given to the government in trust for the people of Canada. One of the great difficulties in negotiating the return of natural resources had been the claim made by Quebec and the Eastern Provinces that the people of Eastern Canada had purchased this land for Canadians and had paid for it. The argument advanced by the representatives from the West was that Westerners had also paid their share, and when the alienation of the land to the Hudson's Bay Company was considered they had paid even more than their share.

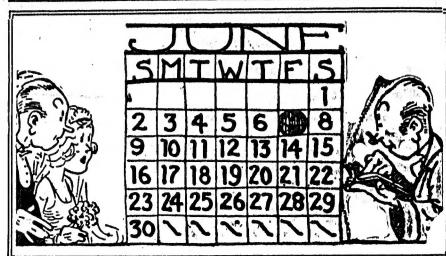

After the Riel Rebellion it was felt that the West should become self-governing and the provinces of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan were formed, the former province with a white population of about 20,000 and the other two provinces had about 200,000 people.

With the organizing of the Western Provinces the question of natural resources and immigration were paramount and the Ottawa statement concluded that in order to keep up the standard of living throughout Canada the mineral rights of the Western lands should be reserved and that the matter of immigration should be controlled by the Federal authorities. Several conferences have been held to consider the return of the resources to the Western Provinces, but little success.

Mrs. R. D. Robertson and Miss Katherine Robertson left for the East Sunday morning, after spending a few days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. D. Wallace. Mrs. E. Roberts and Miss Jarvis of Stettler, also spent the weekend visiting Mr. and Mrs. Wallace. Mrs. Wallace entertained her guests on Saturday evening, in compliment to her guests.

There were no tears shed by the Wetaskiwin party when Miss Norma Chidley hit the tape inches behind Miss Mary Humphries in the 100-yard dash at the Edmonton area on exhibition run, staged as a special Saturday evening, on the occasion of the final basketball series for the International championship, in which the famous Grads romped away from the gang of hoop experts from Detroit. It was Miss Chidley's first appearance at an indoor competition and the result was no indication of the merits of the two runners. Norma was away to the good in the early stages, but tangled up during the sharp turns on the small circular track. She was yards behind coming into the stretch, but picked up in amazing fashion and undoubtedly would have romped ahead in another few yards. It was nevertheless a pretty contest and the runners were vociferously cheered by the twenty-five hundred spectators. Norma was winning the crowd over when she shook hands with Miss Humphries in congratulation.

It was a spectacular exhibition staged later by Miss Chidley and the Grads, who through their manager J. Percy Page, the exhibition had been arranged. Miss Chidley was presented with a very pretty and expensive French beaded hand bag, which is doubtless highly prized by the recipient. The Edmonton Bulletin says that "Miss Chidley made a hit with the fans both by reason of her athletic ability and her modest bearing," and that she "can cover the ground with the best of them."

U.F.A. CONVENTION
AT LACOMBE, JUNE 20 AND 21

The Annual Convention of the Wetaskiwin Federal Constituency Association will be held in the Rex Theatre, Lacombe, June 20 and 21, commencing with registration at 9 a.m. on the first day.

A special feature of this year's Convention will be the separate session for the U.F.W.A. delegates and visitors, which will be held the first morning. Hon. Mrs. Parry and Mrs. Price, Vice-President of the U.F.W.A. will be present, and a real interesting time is expected.

The first day of the Convention will be occupied mainly with the ordinary business of the Association, including the election of officers and the consideration of resolutions.

At 6 p.m. will occur one of the high lights of the Convention in the form of a real social get-together dinner in a nearby building. This will be quite informal, no long speeches and plenty to eat. Naturally a good time is assured. Everybody welcome.

Following this, at 8 p.m., a public meeting will be held in the theatre, at which the principal speakers will be Wm. Irvine, M.P., and Alfred Speakman, M.P. Both these gentlemen are well known for their platform ability.

The second day of the Convention will be devoted mainly to organization matters and arrangements for the coming membership drive. A visit to the Experimental Station is planned for the afternoon providing that the business can be concluded in time. This will provide both enjoyment and education.

The Constituency Board wishes to make it clear that attendance at the Convention is open to anyone and to extend a hearty invitation to all persons interested. Residents of districts where the organization is weak, or where there are no locals, are particularly urged to attend and get in touch with the movement. This will be of great assistance in organization work.

This Convention is of great importance. It is the clearing house for the ideas of all the U.F.A. people in the Constituency. All business intended for the Provincial Convention next January should be discussed here.

This is the place where our member, Mr. Irvine, makes his annual report. Representatives of the Pools will be present, and a very interesting time is assured. This Convention is being held at Lacombe this year in furtherance of the plan adopted last year, when it was decided to hold it in a nearby town each year.

It is confidently expected that the members and friends of the organization will do their share to make this convention a success, even surpassing that of last year.

EDMONTON EXHIBITION,
JULY 15TH TO 20TH

Since the attractions for the Edmonton Exhibition were arranged for, some very interesting features have been secured as "extras"—in line with the policy of the management to make the 50th Anniversary of Western Canada's first exhibition the most attractive ever staged. For the big exhibition which opens in Edmonton on Monday, July 15th, Capt. Walter's observation balloon has been secured; this will recall army days to many. In addition to carrying passengers, it will each night give a display in fireworks depicting Niagara Falls, from 1000 feet in the air.

Two loan exhibits of paintings are being brought to the Edmonton Exhibition at considerable expense and will be displayed on the top floor of the Manufacturers' Building; contrary to custom, no extra charge will be made to view these paintings, which include a number of historical works; all told there will be about 150 paintings by celebrated artists.

Exursion rates on all railways, and a free camping ground for motor tourists, will help swell the attendance.

Town Licenses
A Serious Problem

(Research Bulletin)

As Town Clerk and City Treasurer the writer has experienced difficulty at times in carrying out the law as set down in the local Licensing By-Law and amendments thereto, or even the general law as set down in the Municipal Ordinance.

Difficulties arise in differentiating between the agent of some large concern who carries a Provincial or Federal license and who solicits from door to door but who does not care to be classed as a hawker or pedlar.

As he is only in town for two days he objects to paying a license which covers a whole year—and in fact objects to paying a City or Town license at all when he carries a Provincial one. Then when he does consent to pay the license he objects to paying more than he paid in Camrose or Red Deer or whichever town charged him a smaller fee than Wetaskiwin.

In the Village Act Cap 54, 1927 and the Town Act Cap 55, 1927, and in City Charters, such as the most recent, that of Lethbridge Cap 57, 1928, full powers are set out for licensing but no guide is given for a uniform fixing of the schedule of fees, except in the one single case of circuses where a limit of $500 is mentioned.

Aldermen and Councillors find it a difficult task to apportion license fees now that auto truck, and auto transfer owners and others who might be classed as common carriers do both a country and town business.

In both the Village and the Town Act it is distinctly stated, Cap 55, S164, "The license fees hereinbefore permitted shall not be imposed for the purpose of exacting revenue."

Is no provision to be allowed for auto trucks cutting up the town streets and causing costly maintenance to be paid for out of the ratepayers pocket?

The question of license fees was discussed at the last Convention held in Calgary two years ago. Some consideration should be given this year to the growing need of revising the license fees, and if possible making them uniform in all the towns and cities with say the exception of Calgary and Edmonton where conditions may be different.

Regarding the fixing of license fees, the following correspondence received by the Editor will be found most interesting.

Pincher Creek, Alta.
February 8th, 1929.

Mr. Editor: Dear Sir:

In March 1918, the Town Council of Pincher Creek passed a Licensing By-Law, the terms of which—every hawker or pedlar as defined by the Town Act of Alberta should pay a license fee of $5.00 per day. From time to time various persons had paid the license or had been convicted of a breach of this Licensing By-Law, but no appeal from any conviction had ever been made to a higher Court.

On 12th December last Mr. C. L. Wismer of Lethbridge, a representative of the Brush Pulper Company Limited, was convicted before Mr. A. J. McKenzie, J.P., for exercising the calling of a hawker or pedlar in the Town of Pincher Creek without procuring a license from the Town. He was ordered to pay the costs of Court and the license fee of $5.00 for one day, which were paid.

He appealed against the conviction by way of stated case to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court and the Appeal was heard on Tuesday last. The Judges quashed the conviction on the ground that it had only been proved that the accused had solicited orders for his goods at one house, whereas the definition of a hawker or pedlar in the Town Act is one who goes from house to house selling goods or soliciting orders and their Lordships considered that in order to sustain the conviction on this point, it would have to be proved that the accused solicited orders at more houses than one.

Mr. Wismer had asked the Court to quash the conviction on a number of other grounds, the principal ground being that the license fee was exorbitant, but their Lordships had quashed the conviction on the ground already mentioned declined to express any opinion as to the validity of the other objections to the conviction taken by Mr. Wismer. They indicated, however, that the license fee was much too high and that evidently it had been set at $5.00 per day to protect the merchants in town and it was ultra vires of the Council to pass a By-Law providing for the protection in trade of a certain class. It will, therefore, be necessary for the Town of Pincher Creek to repeal the old Licensing By-Law so far as hawkers and pedlars licenses is concerned and to enact a new By-Law fixing the license fee at a figure that the Higher Court would not consider exorbitant.

We are Solicitors for the Town of Pincher Creek and would be greatly obliged if you would kindly let us know what license fee is payable by hawkers and pedlars under your Licensing By-Law and for any comments you may have to make regarding hawkers and pedlars license, and we enclose stamped envelope for reply. Yours truly,

THOMSON & JACKSON,

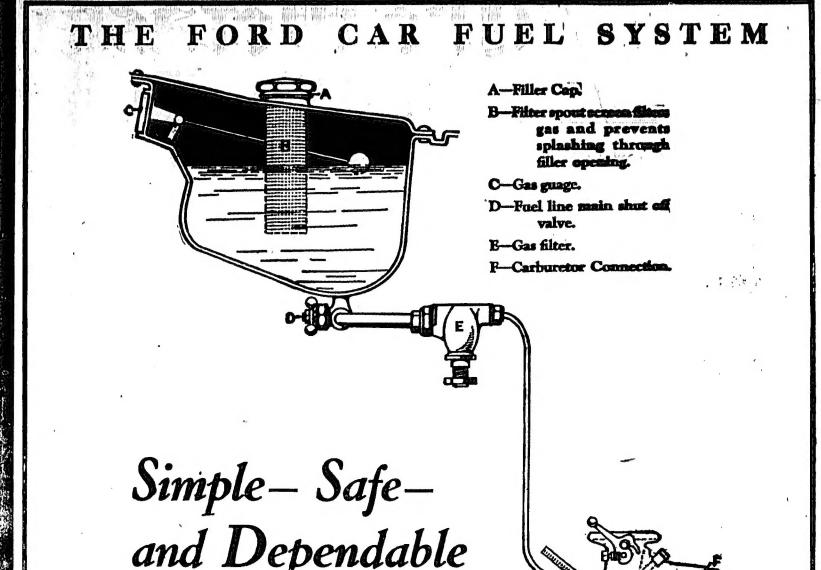

Per D. Thomson, Town Solicitor.

Simple—Safe—
and Dependable

THE Ford car fuel system is simple because it is direct. Gravity flow does away with forced feed. A short feed line with a minimum of elbows and connections is easy to service and eliminates approximately 100 parts required by the vacuum tank or fuel pump system.

The nine gallon tank is so placed that it is well protected from front or rear end collision. Any overflow runs off on the ground with no serious results, since the only point of possible spark contact is the rear end of the exhaust. Three screens instead of one, as in most fuel systems, prevent foreign matter reaching the tank. A solid steel dash separates the Ford gas tank from the engine.

The gas gauge on the dash of the Ford car is controlled by a simple float as shown in diagram, being more direct, simple and accurate than any other type. Another point of driving convenience made possible by the gravity flow system is the ease with which the tank may be filled, while the driver supervises the operation without moving from behind the wheel.

objections to your referring in the Bulletin to the License Case, in regard to which we wrote you on the 8th ult.

It appears to us that the power of Town Councils to fix the license fee to be charged is, under the Town Act, left in a very indefinite state. The Act provides that the license shall be charged on for the purpose of licensing, governing and controlling hawkers and pedlars and shall not be levied for the purpose of revenue. We do not suppose that it costs more than $1.00 per hawker to attend to the licensing, governing and controlling of such hawkers and possibly if a Town fixed a license fee in excess of the actual cost of licensing, governing and controlling, any conviction by the Magistrate under the By-Law would be quashed on appeal.

It appears perfectly reasonable to us that the merchants in a Town on whom a large share of Town taxes are levied should be protected against any outside trader or hawker, but there is apparently no protection for the merchant under the Town Act and the Judges of the Appellate Division would probably quash a conviction on the ground also that any license fee in excess of actual cost of licensing, governing and controlling was levied to protect a class, namely, merchants, and was therefore illegal.

The Council of the Town of Pincher Creek has not yet passed an amendment to its Licensing By-Law, but is not of course requiring payment from any hawker or transient trader in the meantime. We consider that the licensing of hawkers or pedlars is a very important matter indeed, and that merchants should receive protection, and if you were to bring up the matter at the next meeting of representatives from Alberta Municipalities, we believe that there would be very strong support for a motion that application be made to have the Town Act amended in respect of the licensing of hawkers. Yours truly,

WHAT HAPPENED BEFORE
Dr. Long, out fishing with Alexander Pierce, a detective, tells of his projected trip to Southley Downs. Pierce advises him to keep his eyes wide open there. On the way in the train Dr. Long is attracted by a girl, who later faints. Dr. Long treats her, and looking into her bag, is astonished to find a loaded revolver. Dr. Long meets Ahmad Das, an Oriental, who conducts him to Southley Downs, where he meets Mr. Southley and his son, Ernest Southley, Mr. Haywood and his son, Vilas, and then Josephine Southley, who is the girl he had met on the train. Josephine tells him the story of Southley Downs and its ghost, which is not the ghost of a human being but of a tiger. Read on—

CHAPTER III

"My father and some of the servants went out—both Ernest and I went away to school. They couldn't see in the shadows—but my father says that beyond all chance of doubt some living creature bounded through the thickets in front of them. It might have been a calf—or even a large dog."

"A few weeks ago the details began to vary. It was after my father's old friend, Mr. Haywood, and his son came to visit us. But tell me this first. Would you say the younger Mr. Haywood would be troubled with faulty nerves?"

"I saw him jump tonight when the owl hooted."

"Remember, he spent nearly a month in this house. After a month in it, you'll jump too. I mean, under ordinary conditions, away from this atmosphere."

"I would certainly say that Vilas Haywood had no nerves to trouble him."

"Just a few nights after his arrival, Vilas Haywood came in to dinner with a curious look of question on his face. He said he had seen something."

"Josephine's eyes were full and intent upon mine, and the sentence died away. The silence of the vast room was the kind to be listened to in remote forests, or in the mountain nights.

"Yes?" I urged her.

"I don't feel very pleased," she warned.

"A doctor has the right to know all the symptoms."

"He said when he came through the long hall that leads from the drawing room something walked before him.

Haywards' felt cold. Whatever had been fancy and wrong perspective before, this was the truth. His blood wasn't in his hands, as it should have been. Evidently it had all gone up in his brain, playing strange tricks with it.

Ahmad bowed to us as he passed. "Good Lord!" Haywood breathed. "I wasn't looking for that wretch."

"He leaped at me, and I met him with a blow."

It was in the shadows, and he could not see it plain. He asked us if we kept a great yellow or black dog, a hound as large, or larger, than a Great Dane."

The elder Haywood and I were strolling on the course, and a few minutes before our host had been with us. He had gone into the house on some errand. Josephine was with Vilas in the veranda, and his chair was drawn close to hers. At first I wasn't thinking about Haywood or Ahmad either. I was remembering with what astounding fortune Vilas and Josephine always seemed to be alone together.

It was a baffling thing. I couldn't think of any conscious effort in that direction. Yet seemingly powers in the sky were always throwing them together. In one instant, all the occupants of Southley Downs would be on the veranda together; in the next, a group of us would have wandered off, and Vilas and Josephine would be alone.

"Yes."

"Did—did you see anything curious about—about Ahmad's posture as he came up the hill?" Of course, it was probably just the moonlight.

"Yet—yet there was something puzzling about it."

"I'll confess I didn't recognize him at once."

"That isn't it. That isn't quite it. Long, Oh, the devil! It's nonsense, anyway."

We walked up to the veranda and halted for an instant on the steps for a last look over the marsh. There was a ring around the moon that promised rain. We listened to the night birds, and the noise of the insect world, like the strum of a banjo, infinitely remote, above the drear, gray wastes. Then Haywood touched my arm.

"If you'd go in, Long, and look at Ahmad's hands," he told me, "you'd find 'em with mud on 'em."

"Why, Mr. Haywood?"

"Because he was crawling up that hill—on hands and feet!"

Then his face grew into a scowl, and he entered the house.

I had a pipe by myself after he had gone. At first I thought about what he had said. But it didn't make particularly good sense. It was true that Haywood didn't like the Indian, yet this would have scarcely led to an accusation so bizarre. The glare with which Haywood's eyes followed him when the servant worked about the rooms was little short of deadly—I had observed it too many times to be mistaken.

Orders he gave were always in the most insulating tone. It seemed to me just an unjustified aversion, and the taste of the thing was open to question.

There was a tenseness, a heaviness, in the air. It was obviously the calm before one of those blinding, crashing Florida thunderstorms.

I thought I had better warn the occupants of the house. There might be windows to close, or other preparations. The library was empty, but I heard voices in the den that opened from it. And maybe it was a sign that already the atmosphere of Southley Downs had installed its poison into my nerves that I did not remember to stop and knock. With the memory of that mysterious calm behind me, I hurried across the soft rug. The door opened softly beneath my hand.

It was Ahmad Das. He was coming in from one of his long walks. Haywood gasped behind me, and as I moved back, the back of our hands touched.

The scene in the candle-light was like a tableau. The light was so yellow and soft, the shadows so startling black, the actors stood so motionless. With arms leaning upon the little mahogany table in the center of the den stood Vilas Haywood.

There was a drunken look about him; yet I knew it was not from wine. His face was flushed, intent. With the table between them, as if for a shield, Josephine faced him.

"Don't come a step nearer," she said as the door opened.

Her face was white as the candle that burned between them. Its lines were deep, and her dark eyes were smouldering. The little silken weekend bag I had seen on the train lay before her on the table, and her hand was lost in the lace of its mouth.

There were wild, primal passions at play in the room. One of them was lost; and one was the fury of murder. There is on us of mineless words. They were bared and unmasked before me.

Vilas turned to me with an oath. The girl slipped fainting to the floor. I answered him without restraint, and lifted the girl into my arms. I crossed with her to the little sofa at the side of the room where the two had evidently been sitting; then turned to meet the man. He had followed me across the room, and not six feet was between us.

"I think, Dr. Long," Vilas cried, "that you're altogether too officious. You'd better keep out of this."

I am not just sure what I answered him. But primal passions had wakened in me, too, and the words were straight. He leaped at me, and I met him with a blow.

He reeled, then caught at the table. And his hand reached for the silken bag on the table.

I knew that the girl was screaming. The sound rose above the noise of the storm. I leaped for him, but he whirled about the table before I could reach him. He tore the pistol from the bag. It glittered in his hand.

I had no delusions about what he would do with it. The drawn face, the squinting eyes, told all too plainly. He was too far for me to leap at him. So I struck out the candle.

The dark fell over us. The sound of the storm obliterated his breathing. It was the truce of darkness—a truce remembered from primal days.

I don't know how long it had continued when Haywood and Southley came. Their forms suddenly appeared in the open door; and each of them carried candles.

Vilas still held the pistol; and it gleamed in the candlelight.

"Vilas!" his father called. Put down that thing!"

He hastened about the table, and my aged host leaped in front of me. I tried to push him away; and his answer was a laugh— one grim syllable of laughter, ironical.

"He won't kill me," he said. "I'm the goose—that lays the golden eggs. He won't kill me."

Vilas screamed at us. The madness was on him yet.

"He won't kill me," he said. "I'm the goose—that lays the golden eggs. He won't kill me."

"Go on," I urged. "Mose was riding home. I suppose he saw the ghostly floating through the air, or riding a broomstick."

"Nothing quite so bizarre as that," I'm sorry to say. Maybe I talk lightly, but I'm feeling rather serious. Long, our tiger had done nothing except ride a broom, or fly, or something, it would have been a good legend to tell our children—and toast to in good vintages. But unfortunately—our tiger took other ways of manifesting himself. All he did was frighten Mose's horse—and leave his track in the earth."

The man spoke wholly without emotion. He smiled a little, too—a rather wan, hopeless smile that was singularly upsetting to the spirit.

"His track!" I echoed. "You don't mean that."

"He saw a great yellow and black cat—almost as large as a pony. But that isn't quite all. Mose kept his head. He told himself it was a delusion, just as I and you have told ourselves many times. So he controlled his horse; then looked down at the moonlit road. It was covered with dust, and he could see very plainly. And he saw—just what I told you."

I spoke very quietly.

"Tracks?"

"Yes—as big as his two hands, clear across the road. He wanted to take father and the Haywards and I down to see them. I think all of us except father, who is rather old for such excursions, were going—but something has evidently diverted them. They were to meet me here."

"I suppose the rain has spoiled them now."

"Weakened them, anyway. Of course, the colored people are terrible. The night the tiger first went wild was just on such a night as this—in the middle of the storm. They say on such nights as these—he likes

"She has nothing to explain," Southley told me falteringly. I looked at the girl, and no man can measure or describe the anguish that was in her eyes. But she didn't look straight at me. First she glanced at the strong, bulldog figure of the older Haywood. Then she searched for her father's tear-lined eyes, and here she found her answer. "He's right, Dr. Long," she told me. "You must make your own explanations."

"It seems the odds are against me."

I told them simply. "Mr. Southley, I have only done what any American man would have to do, and I can't and won't apologize to anyone. I have carried out the obligation of a guest to his host in the way my instincts told me. Nothing will make me believe that he did wrong. It is evident that you uphold what these other men say—and your daughter upholds them, too. And if you will have my bag brought to me, I will go at once."

The girl clasped her father's hands. A world of appeal was in her dark eyes.

"He can't go, in this storm," she said.

"He told him. 'The road along the levee isn't safe. Tell him he can't go till the storm is over.'

The elder Haywood chortled from beyond the doorway.

"A good wetting might teach him manners," he suggested. "What about it, Southley?"

The tone was insistent, and perhaps it had a scowling quality, too.

"Of course, he can't go until the rain is done. I won't send out my cars on a night like this."

The girl whirled to me. Appeal was all over her.

"You won't go till tomorrow?"

"Tell me, doctor. You won't go till the storm's over?"

"I can't very well, if your father won't let his cars go out." I tried to speak bitterly; but even after her betrayal, the very look of her softened me.

The elder Haywood chortled from the doorway.

"I'm sorry, Ernest. I told him. 'I'm going home tomorrow.'

He stopped in his tracks, and I urged him on.

"Going home? Good Lord, why? I thought you'd stay to see us through."

"Of course, he can't blame you."

"I've got to make a living," I told him lightly. "It's time I went to work."

"But you were going to stay a full week—and you promised she last night that you would make it ten days or two weeks."

"Did she tell you that?"

"Tell me? I should say she did. She danced a Highland fling."

It didn't make the scene of the hour before any more pleasant to remember. She had seemed glad when I had told her that I had postponed my departure. And even now Ernest's words filled me with a strange, soaring gladness that I tried to fight off. She had proved the hour before how much she really cared. She belonged to Vilas, not me, in spite of the fact that she had been ready to kill him when I opened the door of the den. I opened the door of the den. I remembered every smile—each had been an epoch—every softness in her dark eyes, every tremor of her lips.

We tramped through the downpour, and soon we came to the point that the negro had described. Then we began to search about with the lanterns. It must have made a strange picture—the distant lightning, the glowing lanterns, our own tall figures in the yellow raincoats. The great house was dark behind us.

In this tractor there is a compact, heavy-duty, four-cylinder, valve-in-head power plant with numerous built-in features that are now found on any other make of farm tractor.

The improved McCormick-Deering 15-30 tractor is the result of a larger bore, a redesigned cooling system, and improved carburetion. The power transmission members are sufficiently large to convey the increased power delivered by the engine.

The cooling system is an innovation in automotive design and amply meets the requirements of this larger power plant. An impeller pump is located directly over the combustion chamber of the cylinder head. The water then flows by gravity into the cylinder jackets. A valve control regulates the circulation of the water so that proper temperatures are maintained for efficient combustion at all times. The impeller pump is located between the engine and the fan on the fan shaft. Both the fan and impeller pump are positive driven by a cog belt.

McCormick-Deering carburetion is co-ordinated carburetion. Every part of the fuel system from the tanks and air intake to the carburetor is so designed that the most economical use of gasoline and kerosene, by merely adjusting the valves which regulate the exhaust heat.

The built-in oil filter removes grit and other foreign material from the lubricating oil, thus reducing the frequency of oil changes. The oil filter receives the oil from the crankcase and removes the foreign material, returning the filtered lubricant to the engine.

DECISION HANDED DOWN

BCHMULAND VS. S. LUCAS

In the case of Henry Schmulland vs. Sam Lucas, which was adjourned at the last Sittings of the Court and afterwards argued in Edmonton, the Honourable Mr. Justice Ford has now handed down his written decision. He dismissed the action of the plaintiff, holding that he had not established any negligence on the part of the defendant, but even if he had been forced to find negligence on the part of the defendant he held that the defendant had proved his defense of contributory negligence, saying that the unfortunate accident happened entirely through the fault of the plaintiff, and that he was the author of his own misfortune. The judgment gives costs to the defendant.

Mr. Alexander Knox appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. S. B. Woods, K.C., and Mr. R. W. Manley for the defendant.

SHEBA'S HOUSE-CLEANING

Sheba Hanson hung another bed-quilt on the line and stood back to admire the array flapping in the spring breeze. Eleven pieced quilts, almost as brightly hued as when they were put together, Sheba's mother and grandmother had been busy-fingered women. She had inherited their handwork and treasured it, but—she was getting on in years. She felt it this spring as never before. There was a crick this minute in the small of her back. She put her hand there and sighed.

Across the freshening grass stepped an old woman with bright eyes and a large nose under a small black hat from which a tiny posy nodded.

"Those quilts look natural enough," she said, eying them. "I remember when your mother made that one, Sheba. There's a lot of pink calico in it. I'm just as crazy for pink as I was then—I suppose you're cleaning house from top to bottom. And only you in it. You're awful particular. Still it's a good thing to clean out the rubbish once in a while. It accumulates fast."

The trouble is that most of us at our house-cleaning stop at our houses."

"What do you mean, Mrs. Potts?" Sheba pushed back a wisp of graying hair from her eyes as she regarded her visitor wonderingly. The pink posy on Mrs. Potts' hat swayed fast as she replied.

"I mean," she said, "that when you're cleaning your house and making it all tidy and nice it would be a good thing for you to clean your life of that feeling you've had this thirty years against your sister Amy."

Sheba stared after her in angry amazement. It was years since anybody had mentioned her sister Amy's name in her presence. Amy had disgraced them all, and mother and grandmother had died unforgiving. Yet house-cleaning times she found a lot of evidence of Amy in the house—like the pink calico in that quilt. That pink calico had been left over from a dress Amy had. How pretty Amy had been with her soft yellow curls! Sheba's hair was straight as a string. No wonder Emmett Fuller had favored Amy. Oh, it was all a hodge-podge—Amy's running away as she did, Emmett's living and dying an old bachelor, Sheba marrying Ezra Hanson—more hodge-podge. And that old woman had stirred it all up.

Suddenly any pleasure she might have had in house-cleaning vanished. She saw before her a task, yearly, repeatedly, which after all availed her nothing. These quilts, carefully tended, all her china and silver, all her old furniture, the house itself—who would receive them in the end? To begin with they should have been Amy's as much as hers, but they had been given to her because she had behaved in a seemly manner—she could still hear her grandmother enunciating in her hard, cold voice—"a seemly manner."

At the end of a long day of toil and hard thinking Sheba got the quilts back upstairs into the closet. Then she fastened the doors, brewed herself a cup of tea and sat down to her evening meal. But she could not eat. The sense of loneliness oppressed her. Ezra had been gone eleven years and she had no children. The great house loomed over her like a gigantic empty shell; it seemed to be full of strange noises even as a shell is. She started violently and spilled her tea. Somebody was knocking on the window.

She looked out into the small upturned face of a young girl who wore a black cloche hat, a black suit and carried a large black bag in her hand. The girl was smiling. She skipped to the door and knocked. Sheba arose and opened the door. The girl came in. "Your tea smells delicious!" she cried.

"Will you have a cup?" Sheba, unused to dispensing hospitality, felt embarrassed as the girl sat down at the table. Rather unsteadily she poured a cup. "There's bread and cold beef and pickle. Help yourself," she said. The girl sipped the tea, reached for a piece of bread—and covered her face with her hands. She was crying, crying unfriendly, in a little girl's heart-broken way, crying just as Sheba herself often cried.

"My dear!" Sheba said. "What's the matter? Don't take on so—so—she!"

"I feel so glad to be here," sobbed the girl. Swiftly she dung off her black hat and revealed a mass of bobbed hair, full of crinkle and glint, just like Amy's! As Sheba gasped with astonishment she went on: "I didn't have a soul—not a soul—I got so tired of living all alone with nobody that belonged to me—I just had to come and see you, Aunt Sheba!"

Sheba had turned white as the plate before her.

"So you are my sister Amy's girl!" she said. "Where is—Amy?"

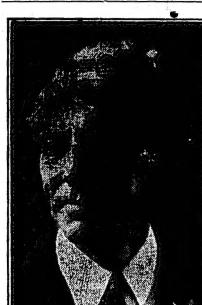

"She has been dead two years—she left me alone—I work in a shop—Oh, I've got friends! But I wanted somebody I loved—somebody like you."

"Well, well, well!" said Sheba.

"How old are you. What is your name?"

"I am 19 years old. My name is June Sheba Glenn."

"Sheba, eh?" Sheba sighed. Amy then had forgiven her even if she had not forgotten her. She sat looking at the blue printed cloth on her to stay there with her, and enjoy the money of which there was far more than Sheba alone needed. But June insisted on being independent. She had acquired the habit of earning, and the shop paid her very good wages.

On the morning when she was to leave, Sheba fell down the cellar stairs. When June helped her up it was found she was considerably banged and bruised, with a twisted ankle. The doctor came, ordered her to bed, and ordered June to stay with her.

When June found that she was really needed, she stayed willingly. Such a nurse as she made!

Every thing in the house kept neat, too. So Mrs. Potts told Sheba.

June stayed. June in the house was the veritable embodiment of that glorious month just approaching. She had the happy spirit, the lilt of her song, the sparkle of her laughter, the beam of her young presence penetrated to every corner.

"I was so surprised to find you in such a large house, Aunt Sheba," she said. "Mother never told me and I fancied you living in a tiny run-down old house. I thought you were quite poor, perhaps in need. In fact," she laughed unsteadily, "I came prepared to—help you a little in case you needed help. I hope you're not angry," she added, "but you see mother always spoke of you as 'poor Sheba', so—you see. And you're not poor at all. You are rich with all these wonderful things—a houseful of them."

"Sometimes," Sheba said gravely, "I feel I am poor—the poorest of the poor. Nobody that belongs to me—nobody to care about me—" Her voice broke.

June put her strong arms about the large elderly figure.

"You have me, Aunt Sheba," she said.

It was fun showing June the patchwork quilts and everything else the house contained, especially the quilts. June fingered the pink calico wistfully.

"I am trying to imagine how mother looked when she wore this," she said. "All the years I knew her she was little and gray and sad. Dad wasn't much comfort to either of us as long as he lived."

In the end there was something of a struggle. For Sheba was determined that her niece should not go back to a needless life of toll. She wanted her

SAYS ALBERTA ON EVE OF BIG GAS FINDINGS

That Alberta is on the eve of a great development in natural gas production, was the opinion expressed by Herbert R. Davis, engineer of Buffalo, New York, who is making an inspection of gas and oil fields in Alberta and Saskatchewan. Mr. Davis was the city's expert in the hearings of the gas rates case before the board of public utilities commissioners in 1927.

Mr. Davis stated that he was spending 10 days making an inspection of oil fields in Alberta and Saskatchewan and was convinced that, literally, the surface had just been scratched. He was confident, he said, that the near future would see an enormous development in natural gas production.

Asked what was his opinion as to the prospects of the Wainwright field, Mr. Davis said he was unable to state definitely, but believed, from charts, reports and information in his position, that this field had a real future, and time would see great developments. Mr. Davis intends to make an inspection of Wainwright and Ribbons fields and then journey to Saskatchewan.

Provincial Weekly News Bulletin

(Issued by Publicity Commissioner, Government of Alberta, Edmonton, Alberta, 1929.)

The number of automobile license plates issued in Alberta during the first five months of 1929 exceeded by over 3,000 the total number for the year 1928, it is announced by E. Trowbridge, Deputy Provincial Secretary. Already this year over 90,000 cars and trucks have been registered as compared with 87,221 last year. A considerable increase in the consumption of gasoline is also indicated. Mr. Trowbridge's report which shows that the revenue from gasoline tax for the first five months has exceeded that of the same period in 1928 by some $170,000.

New Wool Growers Association Organized

The Eastern Alberta Wool Growers' Association has been formed with headquarters at Hanna and a membership comprising about 100 sheep owners in the district between Drumheller and Oyen. It is estimated that some 10,000 fleeces will be shipped through the association this year, the majority of the clip being marketed through the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers.

Regulations for Visiting Motorists

After July 1, 1929, any automobile being driven in Alberta with foreign license plates must carry on its windshield a sticker showing that the car bears a non-resident permit to be operated in this province. These permits which may be secured from provincial police officers, parks officials and others who come in contact with the travelling public, will provide a definite record of the number of cars visiting the province each year and the points of origin. The permit when issued is good for three months from date of issue and must be applied for within seven days of entrance into the province.

Rural Planning Advisors Named

Appointments to the Advisory Council of the Alberta Town and Rural Planning Board have been made by Order-in-Council as follows: C. L. Gibbs, M.L.A., Edmonton; H. M. E. Evans, Edmonton; P. Turner Bone, Calgary; H. E. G. H. Scholefield, Edmonton; Mrs. Wellington Huyck, Strathmore; W. H. Field, Lethbridge.

To Study Conservation of Natural Gas

Dr. R. C. Wallace, president of the University of Alberta and A. A. Carter, chairman of the Board of University Commissioners, are Alberta members of a committee which will co-operate with Dr. Chas. Camsell, Deputy Minister of Mines, Dr. A. W. G. Wilson and C. C. Ross appointed by the Dominion Government to investigate the possible conservation of natural gas at present going to waste from oil and gas wells in this province. The committee will look into such matters as the conservation of gas by storage underground and the utilization of gas as fuel or as a source of other materials such as oil, carbon black and various chemical products.

Farm Young People's Week Successful

Some 160 girls and boys have been in attendance at the recent farm young people's week at the University of Alberta. Interesting lectures and demonstrations dealing with the various phases of farming and home-making were provided by members of the University staff and a number of enjoyable features of an entertaining nature rounded out what has come to be considered an important annual event in the life of the rural young people of the province.

Sheep Poisoned by Death Canas

Following reports received from the Jenner and Atlee districts in south eastern Alberta, Dr. P. R. Talbot, Provincial Veterinarian, recently visited these localities and found that the death of a number of sheep had been caused by their eating a weed known as Death Canas. This weed which grows commonly in a number of districts in the south has been more prevalent than usual this season owing to climatic conditions.

INDEMNITIES OF MEMBERS NOT TO BE INCREASED YET

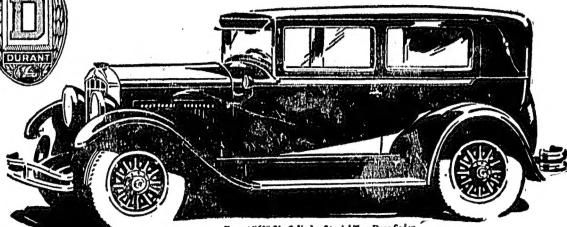

Ottawa, Ont., June 11.—The government does not propose to take any steps to provide increased sessional indemnities for members of the House of Commons or Senate during the life of the present parliament.

The decision of the Exchequer Court exempting Saskatchewan Wheat Pool from paying income tax on its commercial and elevator reserves will likely result in the Alberta Wheat Pool also being exempted from paying. This means a saving of approximately 400 thousand dollars to the Alberta Wheat Pool. Judge Audette who gave the decision in favor of the Wheat Pool, stated in his judgment.

The payment of $202,000 has just been made by the Alberta Wheat Pool to its members. This payment represents the annual interest at 6 per cent in the reserves' contributions up to the 31st of August, 1928. Another payment covering interest on reserves up to August 31, 1929, will be made during the coming fall.

Not without much rattling of brains have I been able to resurrect from the granary of my sub-conscious mind my early impressions of this wonderful Province.

I have been settled here for the period of four weeks, and even that short time has sufficed to accustom me to the manners and methods of this peculiar have disappointed me—on the contrary.

As one gazes on the vast expanse of farming land, it does not need great imagination to see scenes like those depicted in the before mentioned pamphlets—only it is not all roses.

or stage of development in any field of observation.

Unless one has lived in or read about some other nation, one's own nation is neither superior nor inferior.

—It simply is:

When one surveys Alberta, one is tempted to compare the country or maybe to contrast it with the standard erected by the descriptive literature published by the Immigration Departments, not to speak of the alluring advertisements issued by shipping agents.

The fortunate writers of these instructive journals seem invariably to have chanced to have visited and to have photographed the most prosperous part of the country on the ideal day of the year.

True, it is a sound philosophy of life that selects and concentrates attention on the brighter side of things, yet would it not be fairer to give to emigrants a correct idea of the land in which their hopes are centred?

That is not to say that Canada in General and Central Alberta in particular have the predominant idea in my mind was that of immensity, of the vastness of the land upon which I now dwell.

To behold these endless tracts of land bounded only by the horizon, with perhaps a glimpse of the Rockies in the far distance, gives one an impression of the largeness of the country and of the smallness of one's self not to be learned from school books.

The growth is not so green—although it is much more green than I was led to expect—and the soil is not so fertile as that of Ireland. But quantity in this case amply compensates for quality.

Then when one reflects on the wealth of Alberta in mineral wealth untried one holds ones breath and wonders what the country will be like in another generation or so.

The spring and summer climate (I have had no experience of the winter) is enough to make tad the heart of any man coming from the Verdant Isle. Ireland is indeed the garden of the Lord, but it is watered exceedingly.

It is hard to be how any mortal might inhale atmosphere so light, dry and charged with oxygen, basking in such bright sunshines could be for long depressed.

If this Province is true to her appellation "Sunny Alberta," she seems to me to be the climate is worth a lot. The summer may take her leisure in arriving but when she does come Nature works as do the business men of Calgary at Edmonton.

Thus by an easy transition from the climate to the people.

Perhaps it is due to the almost ideal climatic conditions but the people whom it has been my good fortune to meet seem to be very cheerful and very active.

Nearly all are self assured and resourceful looking. Yet their valuable quality is not obscured in other peoples "inferiority complex." There is a strong democratic feeling and class distinctions are nothing like as deeply ingrained as in couples with centuries of labour and commerce behind them.

Perhaps I am wrong, but the business men seem to me to be more machine like in their moods than the men of Old Count cities—although this is more conspicuous in Eastern Canada. This may be better for business purposes, it is the grain in the long run a pity one?

It is refreshing to not a certain freedom from the ties of convention and a willingness to adopt new methods which show promise of facilitating or expediting one end of a business.

The absence of the pressure in trade from which the Old Country is still recovering, and the aerial era of business being done is bad to strike any new comer.

I did not see a single gull on the whole trip from St. Jo to Calgary, except one in Toronto and he was working terribly hard a cacophonous musical instrument—that surely is an index to prosperity of the people.

Most, not all, of the Canadian born people to whom I have listened, use an abnormal amount of slang.

While we sorrow this barbarous mutilation of the King English, we can endorse it, if it is used that the use of expletives thereby diminished.

These are some of the slight differences which in my short sojourn here have observed, but greater far than differences are the similarities.

The people of Alb and of the Old Country are entirely the same. They are stirred by same emotions, fired by the same ideals, and devoted in allegiance to same Empire.

When one reads the development of Western Canada during the last 40 years, there can be no doubt that, through government and agriculture and industry being in the hands of those here or their successors, these men who have their country's gat at heart.

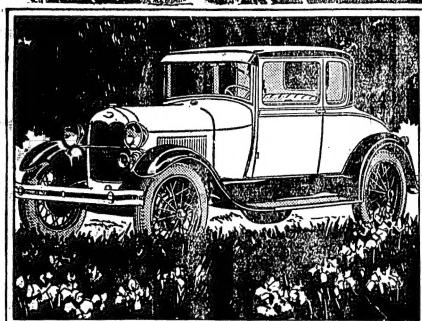

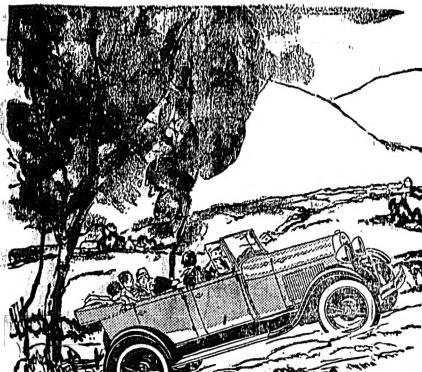

The next two erations will see a development hardly unprecedented in the histot of an old country. Yours etc., J. H. DAVEY.

Rugged and Enduring

THE Ford car is staunch and rugged—built to give year round service under every road and weather condition. The fact that it is smart and beautiful as well is due to the months of painstaking engineering labour that preceded its advent in the motoring world. Time and expense were set aside in the endeavour to produce a light car that would stand up to every requirement both in and out of its weight class. The result has justified this effort and the Ford car has set a new motoring standard based upon high performance at low cost.

It is difficult to measure the full endurance of the Ford car since one year of consistent driving leaves it like new. But it may be estimated by the superior quality of materials used in every part and the precision methods of manufacture employed throughout, that many thousands of miles of carefree motoring are built into its chassis.

ECONOMY—The Ford car averages between 20 to 30 miles to the gallon of gasoline, and the cost of tires and oil is also low. Low first cost, the availability of Ford dealers everywhere, and close supervision of service are additional reasons for the economy of the Ford car.

TIME PAYMENT—If you prefer to buy out of income you will find the authorized time payment plan offered by all Ford dealers most attractive.

development of the requirements of aviation. How will the requirements demanded be provided? Most of us have little knowledge, as yet, of either the technique or practical application of aviation. The problem is one which should have immediate attention from a civic standpoint. The future expansion of our communities require that attention be given to the matter.

Too much to eat—too rich a diet—or too much smoking. Lots of things cause our stomach, but one thing can correct it quickly. Phillips' Milk of Magnesia will neutralize the acid. Take a spoonful of this for a few moments, and the system is soon sweetened.

Phillips' is always ready to relieve distress from over-eating; to check all acidity; or...neutralize nicotine. Remember for your own comfort; for the sake of those you love; for your doctor; for physicians; but they always say Phillips'. Don't buy something else and expect the same results!

for a better crude!

In far Peru—more than 4,000 miles from the station where you fill at Imperial—there is a rich petroleum from which this better motor oil inherits its lubricating superiority.

To bring this better crude to Canada in Imperial's own ships and transform it by special processes into Marvelube is an undertaking which is possible only because of Imperial Oil's immense resources and facilities.

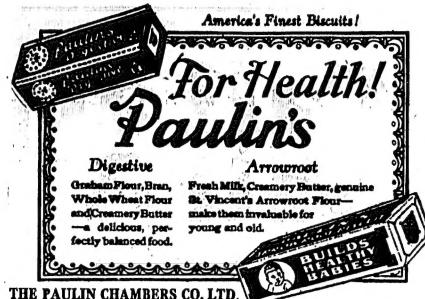

But Marvelube, a better oil because of the natural lubricating properties of its carbon-free, sulphur-free base, is well worth the huge effort and investment.

Marvelube is preferred by aircraft operators because it ensures a greater margin of safety in the air and gives longer periods between engine overhauls. It is the favorite oil of more than a half million motorists in Canada because it insures smoother, more powerful, more economical operation.

There is a grade of Marvelube refined to meet exactly the specifications of your car, truck or tractor at the Imperial Oil stations and dealers.

Subscriptions paid during September were very few indeed, but we understand the cause—the grain is not yet harvested and money is very tight. But we expect our delinquent subscribers to "come through" just as soon as they can.

do not wish to harass anyone with a little bill like a $2.00 subscription. We believe most people, as soon as they can spare the money will be glad to pay this small item. We appreciate the difficulties of this season's financing, and have endeavored to say as little about subscriptions as possible. Word was received by Mr. Carl Finke, on Thursday last, of the death of his father, Mr. August Finke, at Armstrong, B.C. The deceased was a resident of the Patience district for many years and moved with his family to Armstrong about a year ago. He had been in failing health for some time.

A very sad accident occurred at Patience on Thursday of last week, when Mr. William Jehu, a young man of 19 years of age, was thrown from his seat on the tractor, and was caught by the wheel and crushed. He was alone at the time, in the early morning. The funeral was held on Friday afternoon to the Millet cemetery. There was a large attendance and many beautiful floral tributes.

At the congregational meeting of the United Church on Monday evening, the financial situation of the field was discussed, and resulted in a decision to put some extra effort into a canvass for assistance for the present urgent needs, as well as for the continued support, necessary to carry on successfully. Rev. R. B. Layton of Lacombe, Rev. A. L. Elliott of Wetaskiwin, and Rev. Dr. Powell of Calgary, were present, and offered what help they could to assist in adjusting the situation confronting the congregations. The ladies served lunch at the close of the meeting.

SAD DROWNING ACCIDENT

Revelstoke, B.C., June 7—Edwin Wells, seven year old son of Frank B. Wells, was drowned in a backwater of the Columbia river at 7 o'clock last evening. He was playing with two companions near the boathouse of Bob Blackmore. The two youngsters went to Blackmore's house to inform him that Edwin had fallen in the water. He rushed to the scene in time to see the child going down for the last time, some distance from the shore. Police are dragging for the body. (Mrs. Wells was raised in Wetaskiwin and has many friends here.)
